YORK'S CHOCOLATE STORY

WHAT IS YORK'S CHOCOLATE STORY? THE STORY OF HOW CHOCOLATE MADE HISTORY

Continuum Heritage Attraction York's Chocolate Story, located in the heart of York, is an entertaining and informative guided tour through the history of York's most famous chocolate-making families and their finest creations. Visitors can discover chocolate's origins, how to make it, how to taste it like an expert and even the sustainable future of chocolate.

York is the UK's home of chocolate, while other northern centres made their wealth from wool, cotton and steel, York went its own sweet way and built a city from chocolate. This great tradition continues to this day, where all over the city there are echoes of York's chocolate past. At York's Chocolate Story a host of surprising secrets and fascinating facts behind York's greatest chocolate products come to life - from the Chocolate Orange to the globally famous Kit Kat.

There is so much to see, including live chocolate-making demonstrations from skilled chocolatiers and a host of fascinating chocolate artefacts. Visitors can even get hands-on and make their own treats on the factory floor and create their very own chocolate delights.

Once guests have explored chocolate-making and its history, they can shop for and indulge in the finest chocolate in the attraction's café and shop. There's so much to enjoy and discover at York's Chocolate Story in the UK's home of chocolate!

YORK'S CHOCOLATE STORY

WELCOME FROM CONTINUUM ATTRACTIONS

Twenty-five years ago, a Rowntree-led idea for a chocolate-themed visitor attraction never got off the drawing board due to a takeover of the group. However, original members of the York-based Continuum team (then Heritage Projects) knew it had potential if only it could find the right location in the city of York and the finances to make it happen.

Continuum, owner and operator of a growing family of commercial visitor attractions from Edinburgh to Portsmouth, has had its headquarters in York since the conception of the company back in 1984. Having created a Viking museum in the city back in the 1980s it was well placed to create an innovative and vibrant new visitor attraction in its home city.

With 30 years of welcoming a million visitors a year, Continuum believes it knows that the best interpretation technique is in fact the simplest one: a true story told in an engaging way and in a really relevant location – storytelling in its truest form. The company ethos is engaging stories in memorable places, creating great memories for visitors to share and to take home.

York's Chocolate Story is the story of the people of York and how, through the famous Quaker families of the Rowntree's, Terry's and Craven's and the not so famous ordinary folk, they made confectionery and the city synonymous; building brands like Kit Kat which have circumnavigated the globe.

It is ideally located in King's Square, in the heart of the city, at the end of the historic and world renowned Shambles and right on the tourist and locals' route around the city.

It is not a museum or a mini theme park, but a vibrant visitor attraction where stories are told. The positioning adds to the York visitor offer, fitting easily into the classic weekend or day out programme of a museum or two, some wandering and browsing through the medieval walled city, a little shopping and good food.

Since opening in March 2012 visitors from as far afield as New Zealand and Japan have travelled to York specifically to visit York's Chocolate Story, 97 per cent of which said they would recommend it to a friend.

YORK'S CHOCOLATE STORY

WHAT TO EXPECT? YOUR VISIT TO YORK'S CHOCOLATE STORY

Recommended visit time: 1-2 Hours

Be catapulted on a journey through the story of how chocolate made history at York's Chocolate Story in the UK's home of chocolate.

Ideal for explorer families, curious minds and culture vultures! Go on an entertaining and informative guided tour through the history of York's most famous chocolate-making families and their finest creations. From the Chocolate Orange to the globally famous Kit Kat, you'll discover chocolate's origins, how to make it, how to taste it like an expert and even the sustainable future of chocolate.

Engaging storytellers take visitors back thousands of years to the rainforests of Central America where it all began. Moving through the history of chocolate's founding families you'll learn the fascinating facts and surprising secrets behind their finest creations. You'll learn all about factory life and hear stories and memories of the people of York.

Learn how a simple cocoa bean is transformed into the finest chocolate. Immerse yourself in displays and exhibits of some of the most iconic confectionery brands in the world. Design your own chocolate bar wrapper and discover your perfect chocolate bar with a fun chocolate personality quiz.

Get hands on and master the secrets of the chocolatier as you create and decorate your very own chocolate treat to take home!

Following this, there's the chance to see how the experts do it and watch chocolatiers at work in a tantalising chocolate-making demonstration in the production kitchen - and you can even eat the results!

After the tour, put your new found knowledge into practice and choose from a selection of the finest chocolates in the country. Buy peach and raspberry or orange and geranium flavoured chocolates, or browse the many other chocolate delights produced by some of the UK's finest manufacturers in the shop. Finally, no trip to York's Chocolate Story would be complete without a taste of the award winning hot chocolate or chocolate fondue.

York's Chocolate Story is currently ranked #8 of 180 "Thing's to Do" in York on Trip Advisor and was a 2015 finalist in the Visit York awards for Best Large Visitor Attraction in the region.

YORK'S CHOCOLATE STORY

YORK'S CHOCOLATE FOUNDING FAMILIES

York's chocolate and confectionery companies were founded by three families; Rowntree's, Craven's and Terry's. Each family has a unique and fascinating story to tell...

The Tuke's and the Rowntree's

Rowntree's can trace its lineage all the way back to a remarkable woman named Mary Tuke, daughter of a prominent 18th century Quaker. In 1725 she took the then highly unusual step of setting up a grocery business but met with resistance from the York Merchant Adventurers Company. Under their rules Mary needed a licence to trade; however, she was neither a widow nor a daughter of a member of the Company - the prerequisite conditions of receiving a licence - and was therefore unable to obtain one.

Mary ignored their ruling and went about her business regardless of repeated threats to fine her and close her business down. In 1746 Mary's 14 year old nephew William joined her as an apprentice. Under his control the shop began to specialise, importing tea from India and manufacturing cocoa and chocolate.

The Tuke family business in York was passed down from father to son through three generations spanning over one hundred years, but eventually the line ceased in 1857.

However, Samuel Tuke was a good friend of grocer and draper Joseph Rowntree Snr, who had three sons the youngest Henry Isaac was sent to work for Samuel Tuke.

Within three years of joining the Tukes, Henry Isaac Rowntree was in a position to take over the cocoa and chocolate side of the business and created a factory out of a collection of disused buildings by the river. After the business began to struggle Henry's brother Joseph Jnr stepped in and went into partnership with his brother in 1869 in an attempt to turn the company's fortunes around.

Before long Rowntree's was manufacturing Pastilles and Fruit Gums, and launched its famous Elect Cocoa in 1887. As the company's fortunes improved it was able to commission the building of a new factory at Haxby Road, one which would grow to become a 'town within a town'.

Both men took an active interest in the welfare of their workers and in the community at large, a trait that had its roots in their Quaker beliefs. Rowntree's was among the first to offer paid holidays, a company pension scheme and a works doctor and dentist.

Their legacy lives on through the charitable trusts they established, one being a forerunner of the Joseph Rowntree Foundation, and the village of New Earswick, which was built for Rowntree's workers and the people of York.

Craven's

The story of Craven's begins in 1822, when Joseph Hick opened a confectionery business at 48 Coney Street, York. In 1851 Thomas Craven, an apprentice with the business married Mary Ann Hick, Joseph's youngest daughter. This proved to be a shrewd move as Mary inherited her father's confectionery business when he died in 1860. Alas, their good fortune was to be short lived as Thomas died just two years later.

Mary Ann Craven now faced a bleak future. Widowed, and with several children to support, she had little choice but to roll up her sleeves and get heavily involved in the running of the Craven's confectionery business.

It is testament to her determination and courage that just four years later she was listed in Melville's Directory of Business for York as a 'manufacturing confectioner with premises in Coney Street, Pavement and Coppergate', a remarkable achievement in an age when women were rarely involved in business, let alone an enterprise of the scale and success enjoyed by Craven's in this period.

Craven's became the world's largest boiled sweet manufacturer and is now owned by a global confectionery company, Tangerine which is still based in York today.

Did you know...?

When Craven's Coppergate site was demolished in 1966 workers discovered the remains of a Viking settlement beneath the original foundations. The site is now the location of the Jorvik Viking Centre.

Terry's

Joseph Terry was born in York in 1793 and went on to become apprenticed to an apothecary. While this might seem an unusual start to a career in the confectionery business, in fact it was in many respects an ideal preparation for what was to come. The fine art of preparing pastilles, pills and potions gave Joseph the skills required to become a true artist of confectionery.

In 1823 he married Harriet Atkinson and joined her uncle's business – Bayldon and Berry – making cough lozenges, lemon and orange candied peel and other sweets. Two years later, he joined forces with George Berry, the son of one of his employers, to establish Terry and Berry in St Helen's Square, York.

By 1840, and through clever use of the new railways, Terry and Berry were able to sell their products in 75 towns across the north of England.

Following Joseph Terry's death in 1850, his three sons, including Joseph Jnr, established the world famous company of Joseph Terry & Sons, becoming a firm fixture of life in York. A measure of the esteem in which the firm was held can be judged by a report in the Yorkshire Herald on the death of Joseph Jnr in 1898:

"There was no person in the city more beloved and respected, and no-one who was more possessed of the qualities that constitute a genial and amiable Englishman."

After Joseph Jnr's death the firm passed to his son, Francis, and grandson Noel, who went on to introduce Terry's classics such as the Chocolate Orange and Terry's All Gold.

Did you know...?

When Terry's celebrated its bicentenary in 1967 awards were made to staff on the basis of length of service. Such was the loyalty inspired by the firm that the staff present had between them racked up 3,078 years of service.

Chocolate, and the People of York

A New Exhibition from York's Chocolate Story

Friday 27th May

York is the UK's home of chocolate, while other northern centres made their wealth from wool, cotton and steel, York went its own sweet way and built a city from chocolate. Where would we be without the founding families of chocolate, Rowntree's, Craven's and Terrys who created some of our favourite treats such as Smarties, Aero and the world's most popular chocolate bar – the Kit Kat!

Now, in a brand-new exhibition from York's Chocolate Story, visitors will be able to meet the faces behind the industry as the people of York tell us their own chocolate stories.

From factory workers with extraordinary jobs (imagine being a professional jelly wobbler!), to the cheeky children who hid along the roadsides hoping the their hastily dug potholes might provide a shower of treats from passing delivery vans, this exhibition will show a unique perspective of a social history which is so important to the city of York and which York's Chocolate Story is honoured to preserve.

Father's Day
